

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

William Henry Chamberlin is the author of The German Phoenix.

Ronald Hamowy is an editor of New Individualist Review.

Clarence B. Carson, professor of history at Grove City College, is the author of The Fateful Turn and The American Tradition.

H. G. Nicholas is an English historian and teaches at Oxford University.

Quentin L. Quade and Thomas J. Bennett are professors of political science at Marquette University.

John N. Morris is professor of English literature at Columbia University.

Jeffrey Hart is professor of English at Dartmouth College.

Mauro Senesi, who lives in Italy, is the author of a number of short stories which have appeared in American magazines.

The book reviews are contributed by: Stephen J. Tonsor, professor of history at the University of Michigan; Vincent Miller, author and critic living in Spartanburg, North Carolina; C. P. Ives, co-editor of the Burke Newsletter; George W. Carey, professor of government at Georgetown University; Robert F. Byrnes, professor of history at Indiana University; F. C. J. McGurk, professor of psychology, Alabama College; Henry M. Adams, professor of history at the University of California, Santa Barbara; J. V. Langmead Casserly, professor of theology, Seabury-Western Theological Seminary; Felix Morley, author of Freedom and Federalism; Louis I. Bredvold, author of Brave New World of the Enlightenment; Garry Wills, author of Politics and Catholic Freedom; J. M. Lalley, associate editor of MODERN AGE; Ralph J. Mills, Jr., on the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago.