

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Will Herberg is a professor of philosophy and culture at Drew University; his article is based on a paper presented on March 31, 1967, at a meeting of the Philadelphia Society, in Chicago.

Vladimir Andreyev, a former Lieutenant Colonel of the State Security Forces of the USSR, is currently engaged in literary research in the area of Soviet affairs. He is the author of Gamalis and Other Tales From Stalin's Russia.

C. E. Carrington is former professor of British commonwealth relations at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, London, and the author of Soldier from the Wars Returning.

Mario Pei is professor of romance languages at Columbia University.

Harold O. J. Brown is on the staff of the International Fellowship of Evangelical Students, Lausanne, Switzerland.

Mihalyi Csikszentmihalyi is professor of sociology at Lake Forest College.

J. Edward Bond, a graduate of the Harvard Law School, prepared his article while a research fellow at the Institute for Humane Studies, Menlo Park, California.

Thomas E. Connors is a member of the English department at Suffolk University, Boston.

The book reviews are contributed by: J. M. Lalley, associate editor of MODERN AGE; Eugene Davidson, editor of MODERN AGE and author of The Trial of the Germans; Robert H. Ferrell, professor of political science, University of Connecticut; John E. Rexine, associate professor of the Classics and chairman of the department, Colgate University; John Gimbel, professor of history, Humboldt College; Alan Mitchell, professor of history, Smith College; George N. Crocker, lawyer and syndicated columnist, San Francisco, California; George S. Schuyler, a Negro journalist and author of Black and Conservative; C. P. Ives, associate editor of the Burke Newsletter; Allen T. Blount, retired Colonel of the Army Corps of Engineers, who has made an extensive study of African affairs; Z. John Levey, practicing psychiatrist, and associate professor of psychology, Cantonville Community College, Maryland.

Verse contributed by Richard Snyder, who has published short fiction and poetry in both British and American journals and magazines. He is a member of the English department at Ashland College.