

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Stephen Tonsor is professor of European intellectual history at the University of Michigan. He has published widely in both scholarly and popular journals.

Helmut Schelsky is professor of sociology at the University of Bielefeld. He is the author of one of the most noteworthy books on the German university, Einsamkeit und Freiheit: Idee und Gestalt der deutschen Universität und ihrer Reformen, and he has also written major works on German youth and the German family in the post-war years.

Edward Shils, professor of history at Cambridge and the University of Chicago, is also editor of the London based quarterly review Minerva, where the Schelsky article first appeared.

George W. Carey is professor of government at Georgetown University and editor of The Political Science Reviewer.

William A. Stanmeyer, former professor of law, Georgetown University Law Center, has been director of the Center for Law and Education, Evanston, Illinois, and is now a member of the faculty at Indianapolis Law School.

Ronald Max Hartwell, formerly dean of humanities at the University of New South Wales and editor of The Economic History Review, is professional fellow of Nuffield College, University of Oxford. His books include The Industrial Revolution and Economic Growth, and British Economy and Society (with R. Breach).

Gustavo R. Velasco, honorary life president of the Mexican Bar Association and past president of the Mexican Bankers Association, was for many years professor of administrative law and dean of the Escuela Libre de Derecho of Mexico City.

William Cullen Dennis is professor of history at Denison University and a trustee of the Philadelphia Society.

The book reviews are contributed by: J. M. Lalley, associate editor of Modern Age; Eugene H. Methwin, senior editor of Reader's Digest; Clyde Wilson, professor of history, University of South Carolina; Haven Bradford Gow, a writer whose articles have appeared in The Intercollegiate Review and other publications; W. H. Hutt, professor of economics, University of Dallas; Paul Craig Roberts, professor of economics, West Georgia College and research fellow of the Hoover Institution, Stanford University; Gabril Gersh, professor of English, Hunter College; Tommy W. Rogers, professor of sociology, Mississippi College; Nathaniel Weyl, professional writer, author of numerous books and articles, residing in Delray Beach, Florida; Thomas Molnar, professor of French literature at the City University of New York and professor of European intellectual history at C. W. Post College.