Notes on Contributors

M. E. Bradford, Professor of English at the University of Dallas, is co-editor, with James McClellan, of Debates in the Federal Convention of 1787 as Reported by James Madison, recently published by the James River Press. His article in this issue of Modern Age was originally an address given in April 1986 before the Philadelphia Society, which he has served as President.

Frank R. Harrison, III is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Georgia. He is the author of Deductive Logic and Descriptive Language and has contributed to many scholarly journals in the areas of philosophy of religion, philosophy of mind, and ethics.

Russell Kirk is the founding editor of Modern Age. Now editor of the quarterly University Bookman and President of the Marguerite Eyer Wilbur Foundation, he is the author of twenty-six books, the best-known of which, The Conservative Mind (1953), has been a major influence in altering America’s climate of opinion. Currently he is editing the Library of Conservative Thought for Transaction Books. Dr. Kirk is a recipient of the Presidential Citizens Medal.

Henry Regnery received his B.S. degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1934 and his M.A. degree from Harvard University in 1938. He also studied at the University of Bonn in Germany. He was the founder in 1948 of the Henry Regnery Company; in 1977 he founded Gateway Editions, Ltd., Book Publishers, now Regnery Gateway, Inc. He is the author of Memoirs of a Dissident Publisher (1979). A founder of Modern Age, he has become a regular contributor to the journal since 1957.

Donald Atwell Zoll has been a contributor to Modern Age for over a quarter of a century during his career as a political philosopher. He is the author of a number of books, including Twentieth Century Political Philosophy. Retired from university teaching, Professor Zoll lives in Arizona.

The reviews and comments are contributed by: Milton Birnbaum, Dean, School of Arts and Sciences, American International College; D. R. Crane, Instituut Engels Amerikaans, Katholieke Universiteit, Nijmegen, The Netherlands; James R. Kelly, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Fordham University; Don Kleine, Department of English, University of Maryland; George J. Lankevich, Department of History, Bronx Community College of the City University of New York; Lewis A. Lawson, Department of English, University of Maryland; Rev. Luke W. McCann, St. Ann’s Church, Staten Island; Edward T. Miles, a free-lance writer who divides his time between New York and Europe; Eugene Paul Nassar, Department of English, Utica College; Virgil Nemoianu, Comparative Literature Program, The Catholic University of America. Mark Christhilf is a poet who lives and writes in Illinois.

CORRECTION

The third sentence of the article “Civic Virtue and the Gods” (Summer/Fall 1987, p. 252) was printed incorrectly. It should have read: “Other works will be considered where necessary, but the choice of these texts has been made because in them the relationships of Socrates and Zarathustra with the people are made clear.”