Notes on Contributors

BARRY COOPER is Professor of Political Science at the University of Calgary. He has published numerous articles on political philosophy and Canadian politics. His most recent books are The End of History (1984), The Political Philosophy of Eric Voegelin (1986), and Alexander Kennedy Isbister (1988). He delivered the Loyola Lectures in Political Analysis in 1989 under the title, "Action into Nature: Five Lectures on the Meaning of Technology."

DONALD W. LIVINGSTON is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia. A recent Fellow at the Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities at the University of Edinburgh, he has written a number of essays on David Hume. His book, Hume’s Philosophy of Common Life, was published by the University of Chicago Press in 1984.

JAMES W. MULLER is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Alaska, Anchorage. He received his A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University. He is editor of The Revival of Constitutionalism (University of Nebraska Press, 1988) and has published articles on Tocqueville, Wodehouse, and Churchill. From 1988 to 1989 he was an Academic Visitor at the London School of Economics. His essay is part of a forthcoming book, to be called The Education of Winston Churchill.

GREGORY B. SMITH is Assistant Professor of Political Philosophy at Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota. He received his B.A. from Syracuse University and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Chicago. Forthcoming is his book: Between Eternities: Nietzsche, Heidegger and the Ontological Foundation of Political Philosophy.

PETER AUGUSTINE LAWLER is Associate Professor of Political Science at Berry College, Mount Berry, Georgia. He has published over fifty articles, book chapters and reviews, mostly on the relationships between religion, politics, and philosophy in America.
L. PETER SCHULTZ is Associate Professor of Political Science at Radford University in Radford, Virginia. Recently, he has published an article in the University of Kentucky Law Review entitled "The Constitution, The Presidency, and The Rule of Law." He is currently working on a book on Nixon v. Fitzgerald as well as an untraditional introduction to the Constitution and constitutional law.

JOHN C. CAIAZZA is Financial Aid and Admissions Officer and Assistant Professor at the Massachusetts General Hospital Institute of Health Professions in Boston. Previously, he was an administrator at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, Brown University and New England School of Law. His essays and book reviews have appeared in Chronicles, the Intercollegiate Review, and Modern Age. His essay, "Milgram's Experimental View of Authority," appeared in the Political Science Reviewer, Fall, 1985.

THOMAS MOLNAR is Professor of French Literature and Humanities at the City University of New York and Visiting Professor of Religious Studies at Yale University. The holder of an honorary doctorate from the University of Mendoza, he was also awarded the Silver Medal of the City of Nice for excellence in political thought. Molnar has written numerous books and contributes to many of the scholarly journals in America, Europe, and South America. Among his recent works are The Pagan Temptation (1987) and Twin Powers, Politics and the Sacred (1988). His next book, written jointly with General Pierre Gallois, L'Europe quitte-t-elle l'histoire? [Is Europe abandoning history?], will be published in France in 1989.